Acknowledgement of Country

“We acknowledge the tradition of custodianship and law of the Country on which the University of Sydney campuses stand. We pay our respects to those who have cared and continue to care for Country.”

Our Indigenous strategy outlines our commitment to creating higher education and leadership opportunities for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and valuing Indigenous culture.

We offer a range of initiatives to assist Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples who dream of studying with us, including our pre-tertiary outreach program, admission pathways and scholarships and other financial support.

Our services and facilities also include study spaces, academic workshops, ongoing tuition and accommodation support, as well as mentoring and other networks for new Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students settling into university life.

Co-Chair's Welcome

We are thrilled to host you for the 2026 ACERE Conference at the University of Sydney!

This is the second time the conference has been organised by the Australasian Consortium for Entrepreneurship Research Excellence (ACERE). ACERE took over responsibility for the conference in 2024, assuming stewardship from QUT to broadly promote innovation and entrepreneurship scholarship across Australasia.

We have an exciting conference! Like last year, there has been a strong response to this year's conference which features with over 150 papers being presented, over 40 paper development sessions, almost 30 doctoral students in the consortium, an educator's forum and an industry forum. The submissions indicate a very high quality of presentations covering micro topics like individual action and cognition, firm-level topics such as entrepreneurial strategy, macro-level topics addressing policy and governance, and context-level themes including sustainability and digitalization. Our attendees represent diverse cultures from around the globe, spanning the full spectrum from PhD students to eminent senior scholars. Our keynote speakers, Erko Autio and Michael Lounsbury, will challenge us to think differently about entrepreneurial tools and entrepreneurial possibilities.

We thank the universities acting as sponsors as well as their representatives on the governing committee for financially supporting this challenging but rewarding endeavour. We also extend a warm welcome to our original founding members, and acknowledge those who paved the way, specifically Murray Gillin for establishing the conference, Per Davidsson for elevating it to a new level, and past custodians such as Kevin Hindle, Martin Obschonka, and Rui Torres de Oliveira.

We also thank the convenors, session leaders, keynote speakers and ecosystem partners who helped organise the event, with a special mention for the hard work of Conference Manager Olivia Towers and Technical Manager Mehrzad Saeedikiya. Most importantly, we thank you for participating and contributing to a vibrant conference.

We hope you find this week developmental, rewarding, and fun, offering a chance to reconnect with old colleagues, make exciting new connections, and collectively shape research and practice in innovation and entrepreneurship

Keynote Speakers

Professor Erkkö Autio

Professor Erkkö Autio FBA FFASL is Chair in Technology Venturing and Entrepreneurship at Imperial College Business School, London. A leading scholar in entrepreneurship and innovation, Erkkö has conducted pioneering research in areas including digital entrepreneurship, innovation ecosystems, business model innovation, and entrepreneurial resilience. His work has been cited over 60,000 times (Google Scholar), and he ranks among the top 0.2% of scientists globally in research impact. In 2024, he received the USC Helena Yli-Renko Research Impact Award for the most cited paper published in the field of entrepreneurship six years prior.

He was a co-founder of the Global Entrepreneurship and Development Institute and a key contributor to the Global Entrepreneurship Index and the EU Regional Entrepreneurship Index. He was also a founding member of the Global Entrepreneurship Monitor (GEM), the world's largest ongoing research consortium in social sciences.

Professor Autio's work has been featured in major media outlets including The Economist, Financial Times, The Wall Street Journal, Forbes, and CNN. He has received numerous best paper awards and was recognised as one of the 50 most influential management scholars worldwide in terms of research impact (Aguinis et al., 2012).

He has advised the European Commissioner for Innovation and Entrepreneurship and worked extensively with governments and industry in Europe and Asia on innovation policy. Four of his students' ventures have been listed among Europe's '100 Hottest Technology Ventures', and student-founded businesses under his guidance have generated billions in new market value.

Professor Michael Lounsbury

Michael Lounsbury is a Professor, the A.F (Chip) Collins Chair, and Chair of the Strategy, Entrepreneurship and Management Department at the University of Alberta School of Business, where he is also the Academic Director of the eHUB entrepreneurship centre. He is also a Professor of Business Strategy & Entrepreneurship (Part-Time) at the Australian National University College of Business and Economics. Dr. Lounsbury is internationally-recognized as an authority in organization and management theory, and is well known for his pioneering role in developing cultural and institutional approaches to the study of entrepreneurship and social change. As one of the world's most influential researchers, he has well over 100 publications, and over 40,000 citations to his published work according to Google Scholar.

In 2018, he was elected to be a Fellow of the Academy of Management, the most prominent recognition for scholarly excellence from the main academic association in his field. In 2025, he was elected to be a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada. At the University of Alberta, he was awarded the Martha Cook Piper Research Prize in 2010, and the J. Gordin Kaplan Award for Excellence in Research in 2020—the most prestigious University of Alberta research award. He has generated a great deal of grant funding over his career, and has recently received a $3M grant from Innovation and Science Development Canada to develop a Canada-wide 2SLGBTQIA+ Entrepreneurship Knowledge Hub. He has previously served as Chair of the Organization and Management Theory Division of the Academy of Management. His Ph.D. is in Sociology and Organization Behavior from Northwestern University.

Panellists and Academic Leads

Binyam Alemayehu

Binyam Alemayehu's research spans entrepreneurship, spirituality, and leadership. He is particularly interested in how affective and behavioural factors shape individuals' evaluations of entrepreneurial opportunities, and how spiritual and religious values influence entrepreneurial action and resilience. His work also explores emerging areas such as artificial intelligence in entrepreneurship, women's entrepreneurship, migrant entrepreneurship, and entrepreneurial ecosystems in Africa. Through this multidisciplinary lens, Binyam seeks to deepen understanding of the psychological and cultural dimensions of entrepreneurship, contributing to both academic theory and practical insights for diverse entrepreneurial contexts.

Matthew Bright

Matthew Bright is an entrepreneurial executive with extensive experience building and advising high-growth ventures across start-ups, scale-ups, internal ventures and publicly listed organisations. He brings operational expertise across new venture creation, product and market expansion, go-to-market strategy, strategic partnerships, sales leadership and distribution platform development, and managing the transition from start-up to scale-up. His professional background includes significant involvement in fundraising, corporate development, mergers and acquisitions, post-transaction integration and the establishment of new business units. Matthew has expertise spanning sector-focused venture development, investment analysis, deal evaluation, structuring and securitisation. He is active in Australia's technology start-up and scale-up ecosystem as an Entrepreneur-in-Residence, university lecturer and strategic advisor, contributing to founder development, venture growth and the translation of entrepreneurial theory into practice.

Henri Burgers

Henri Burgers is the Head of the Strategy & Entrepreneurship Discipline at The University of Queensland. He obtained his PhD from the RSM Erasmus University, and worked at QUT prior to joining UQ. His research focuses on the intersection of corporate entrepreneurship, managerial and organisational capabilities, and institutional contexts with the aim of helping individuals and organisations unlock their entrepreneurial potential. He has published in top journals such as Strategic Management Journal, Journal of Business Venturing, Long Range Planning, and Technovation. He has worked with leading firms, industry associations and governments across the globe. His research received well over 1mil AUD in research funding, including two prestigious grants from the Australian Research Council to improve entrepreneurship and innovation in the natural resources industries. Henri teaches courses and provides workshops on strategic decision-making and agile innovation for different levels.

Suwen Chen

Suwen Chen is a Lecturer (Assistant Professor) and Emerging Scholar Research Fellow at the University of Sydney Business School, Australia. Her research focuses on impact investing and impact measurement, social entrepreneurship, and sustain-able management, with an overarching interest in how businesses can be mobilized as forces for social and environmental good. Her work is informed by a global orientation and supported by her role as an honorary member of the Green Angel Syndicate, as well as her advisory engagements with investment firms, charities, and the United Nations Development Program. Suwen's research and commentary have appeared in leading academic journals, including the Journal of Management Studies, Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice, Journal of Business Venturing Insights, and Strategic Organization, as well as in the Financial Times, scholarly book chapters, and business cases.

Sarah Cooper

Sarah Cooper is Professor of Entrepreneurship and Enterprise Development at the University of Edinburgh Business School, Edinburgh, Scotland. Her teaching experience spans undergraduate, postgraduate and continuing professional development communities in the UK and overseas, including Australia, China and Gulf States. She has worked extensively in the area of entrepreneurship and new venture creation, technology commercialisation and strategy, designing and delivering curriculum-based courses, and extracurricular short courses and Summer Schools on enterprise and business, both in the UK and overseas. Sarah's main research interests lie in entrepreneurship and new venture creation, with principal streams focusing on entrepreneurship, innovation and growth in technology businesses, and influences on individual motivation and capability to engage in entrepreneurial behaviour.

Jarryd Daymond

Dr Jarryd Daymond is a Lecturer in Strategy, Innovation, and Entrepreneurship and the Academic Director (Strategic Initiatives) at The University of Sydney Business School. He also holds a Fellowship with the Higher Education Academy, serves as a convenor for the Innovation and Commercialisation node of the Sydney Policy Lab, is an Early Career Researcher Ambassador for the Sydney Nano Institute, and previously held a Strategy Research Foundation Dissertation Scholarship from the Strategic Management Society. Jarryd's collaborative approach is at the centre of his multidisciplinary research. He actively engages with scientists, engineers, biomedical researchers, and academic entrepreneurs, to collectively enhance understanding of science commercialisation processes. His unique background and practice-oriented research, coupled with his use of human-centred design, facilitated group collaboration, and lean innovation, have supported scientists in their commercialisation journeys.

Per Davidsson

Per Davidsson is professor in entrepreneurship at the Jönköping International Business School (JIBS), Sweden, and at QUT, Brisbane, Australia. As a pioneer of entrepreneurship research, Per has led research centers in Sweden and Australia, chaired the primary professional association for entrepreneurship research globally, supervised dozens of research students and post-doctoral fellows, authored some of the best-cited works in this field, and served as associate editor of several of its leading journals. For these contributions, Per has been presented with the Global Award for Entrepreneurship Research (2023) as well as several other prestigious awards and an honorary doctorate at Leuphana University, Germany.

From his earlier work, he is known for research on firm growth, nascent entrepreneurship, the venture creation process, and entrepreneurial bricolage, among others. He currently focuses on external enablement—how various types of changes to the business environment (technological, regulatory, sociocultural, demographic, macroeconomic, natural-environmental, etc.)—provide potentials for new and improved business activities. He is the main architect behind the External Enablement concept and framework, which has triggered a new research stream into how environmental changes can be leveraged in business development.

Manjula Dissanayake

Manjula Dissanayake is the Associate Head of Learning & Teaching - Adelaide Business School and the Academic Director – ThincLab & Entrepreneurship Programs of the University of Adelaide. He is an expert on strategising for sustainability and social impact at the Yunus Centre for Sustainability and Social Impact. He specialises in entrepreneurial learning taking a technology-centric approach to provide a flexible and personalised learning experience. He has also designed and facilitated many business accelerator/pre-accelerator programs including eChallenge program the longest-running pre-accelerator program in South Australia and Business Model Innovation program for business leaders in South Australia and Victoria. Manjula is also a certified Personal Initiative coach, the only empirically proven program to result in 30% profit growth in two years by practising business leaders.

Antje Fiedler

Antje Fiedler is an Associate Professor at the University of Auckland Business School, specialising in entrepreneurship and international business. She is the Director of the New Zealand Asia Institute (NZAI). She is passionate about conducting research that is relevant to practice. Her research interests centre on how SMEs can productively engage with Asia. Her research has informed courses at the University of Auckland Business School and practitioner workshops across New Zealand. Antje has received three Excellence Awards for Teaching at the University of Auckland Business School. She is also a Director on the Board of the Small Enterprise Association of Australia and New Zealand (SEAANZ) and a Board Member of the India New Zealand Business Council. She is an Editor of Small Business Economics, an Associate Editor of the Journal of Small Business Management and Review of Managerial Science, and serves on several other editorial boards, including Foundations and Trends® in Entrepreneurship and Small Enterprise Research.

Paul Finn

Paul is an education-focussed lecturer with the Discipline of Strategy, Innovation and Entrepreneurship at the University of Sydney Business School -- a discipline that brings together academia, business, government and civil society organisations to both catalyse and research innovation and strategy. Paul designs, coordinate and teaches into the new cross-faculty Innovation and Entrepreneurship Major spanning all faculties and schools at the University of Sydney, in addition to designing and coordinating Entrepreneurship, Strategic Management, and Foundations in Strategy, Innovation and Management units of study at undergraduate and postgraduate levels. Paul researches entrepreneurship, power, and organisational creativity. He is particularly interested in 'creative' spaces, incubators, and accelerator programmes, and questions such as who -- and what -- gets to be involved in such spaces, who benefits, who doesn't, and the implications of such.

Anna Fitzgerald

Anna Fitzgerald is a lecturer in the faculty of Strategy, Innovation & Entrepreneurship at The Sydney University Business School. She is an ex-founder and was an early employee at fintech Prospa, where she helped grow the business from scrappy startup to ASX-listed company - running the IPO process not once, but twice. She's now co-head of the Genesis Accelerator at the University of Sydney and an active startup advisor across Australia and New Zealand. Anna has worked as a fractional CMO for a number of scaleups including Silicon Valley-based ServiceRocket; and has mentored founders through Startupbootcamp's global fintech program, New Zealand's Ministry of Awesome, and is part of the AirTree Explorer program supporting early-stage investment.

Foo Maw Der

Foo Maw Der is President's Chair in Entrepreneurship and Professor at Nanyang Business School, Nanyang Technological University. He was Director of the NTU Entrepreneurship Academy (NTUpeneur) from 2022–2025 and also served as Acting Associate Vice President (Entrepreneurial Education). He co-founded Startup@Singapore and was a lead organiser of MIT's $50K (now $100K) Business Plan Competition. With a strong interest in fair and sustainable business practices, he is Vice-Chair of the Consumers Association of Singapore CaseTrust Advisory Council. He has served as Field Editor for Journal of Business Venturing and Entrepreneurship: Theory & Practice, and sits on the editorial review boards of Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Perspectives, Entrepreneurship: Theory & Practice, Journal of Management, and Strategic Entrepreneurship Journal. He teaches leadership, management, and entrepreneurship, and holds a BBA (Honours, Second Upper) from the National University of Singapore and a PhD from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Gerda Gemser

Gerda Gemser is a Full Professor of Entrepreneurship & Innovation and Chair of Entrepreneurship at the University of Melbourne (Australia). She is also Co-Editor-in-Chief of Journal of Product Innovation Management. She enjoys doing research, often in close collaboration with industry professionals, on the management of creativity, entrepreneurship, and innovation. In specific, is she interested in value co-creation, strategic design practices and leadership, management of innovation-related (and paradoxical) tensions, and (radical) business model innovation. From a theory perspective, she is particularly interested in paradox theory, selection system theory, and process-based theorizing, amongst others. She has applied both quantitative and qualitative research methods in her past research but is particularly passionate about case study research. She has published in Academy of Management Journal, Organization Science, Organization Studies, Journal of Management, California Management Review, Journal of Product Innovation Management, Long Range Planning, and several others.

Murray Gillin

Professor Murray Gillin is a distinguished academic in entrepreneurship and innovation and the founder of AGSE, established 22 years ago as the forerunner to ACERE, where he played a foundational role in shaping Australia's national entrepreneurship research and education community. He is Emeritus Professor of Entrepreneurship and Innovation at Swinburne University of Technology and previously held senior leadership roles including Dean of Engineering and Pro Vice-Chancellor. He is internationally recognised for establishing the world's first Master of Entrepreneurship and Innovation and for advancing industry-integrated and work-integrated learning in higher education. His early career included senior defence science research roles and international appointments, including Defence Research Attaché at the Australian Embassy in Washington. He has served as President of Engineers Australia and President of the World Association for Cooperative Education. A Fellow of the Australian Academy of Technological Sciences and Engineering, he was appointed a Member of the Order of Australia for services to engineering, innovation, and higher education, and continues to contribute to entrepreneurship education and academic leadership in Australia and internationally.

Timothy Hor

Timothy Hor is an Assistant Professor at RMIT University's School of Management, bridging three decades of entrepreneurship practice across venture creation, scale-ups, and innovation leadership in the Asia-Pacific with research on entrepreneurial judgment, agency, and ethical decision-making in technology-intensive contexts. His current work addresses a central challenge in business education: when AI can generate pitch decks, business plans, and market analyses on demand, what becomes of traditional entrepreneurship pedagogy? Rather than treating generative AI as a threat or shortcut, Timothy reframes it as a cognitive partner that amplifies learning while foregrounding distinctly human capabilities including problem framing, moral reasoning, contextual judgment, and reflective sense-making under uncertainty. He has led the redesign of multiple MBA and executive programs around this human-centric, AI-first approach, translating emerging technologies into pedagogically rigorous learning models.

Anna Jenkins

Anna Jenkins, an Associate Professor in Entrepreneurship and Innovation at the University of Queensland, Australia. Her research focuses on how entrepreneurs navigate the process of starting, managing and exiting their firms. She researches the impact and implications of firm failure for owner-managers, and her recent work takes a process and practice perspective to understand new venture emergence. She currently holds two prestigious Australian Research Council Grants having brought in over 7.5 million in research funding during her career. She has published in Journal of business Venturing and International Small Business Journal, among others, and sits on the editorial review boards of Journal of Business Venturing and Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice.

Ashton Jones

Ashton Jones is a senior commercial and strategy professional with expertise in growth, retirement policy, innovation, and customer-focused proposition design within Australia's financial services sector. He has held executive leadership roles across superannuation, insurance, and wealth management, contributing to long-term growth strategies and partnership models aimed at improving retirement outcomes. He works at TAL Australia, where his focus is on retirement income innovation, institutional partnerships, and strategic market development. His professional experience reflects a strong emphasis on aligning commercial strategy with demographic change, regulatory evolution, and shifting consumer expectations. Ashton is an established writer and commentator who regularly publishes research-informed analysis and essays on retirement systems, economic security, innovation, and the future of work. His writing is widely read across industry and policy circles and contributes to discussions on structural reform and long-term system sustainability. He frequently speaks at industry and academic forums and engages with practitioners, policymakers, and researchers to explore evidence-based approaches to innovation and growth.

Kim Klyver

Kim Klyver is an internationally recognised professor of entrepreneurship at the University of Southern Denmark and an adjunct professor at the University of Adelaide. He has previously held academic appointments at the Stockholm School of Economics (part-time), Swinburne University of Technology, and Stanford University. His research examines how entrepreneurs interact with their environments to discover opportunities, acquire resources, and gain legitimacy, with over 20 years of work focused on networks, external crises and poly-crises, psychology, culture, and gender differences. He has published extensively in top-tier journals including Journal of Business Venturing and Entrepreneurship: Theory & Practice, and authored several books, including a bestselling entrepreneurship textbook (Edward Elgar), a research volume on entrepreneurship as networking (Oxford University Press), and a practical management book nominated second-best in Denmark (2021). He is Associate Editor of the Journal of Business Research and serves on the editorial boards of numerous leading journals. His research has received multiple international awards and funding from prestigious institutions.

Olga Kokshagina

Olga Kokshagina is an Associate Professor in Innovation & Entrepreneurship at University of Sydney. She is an Adjunct Researcher at Monash University's Emerging Technology Lab and the UNU Hub - Learning Planet Institute. She is also a member of the French Digital Council. Her research explores the role of collaboration and technology in shaping innovation development and scaling in complex challenges, with a strong focus on healthcare, deep tech innovation and co-design.

Moren Levesque

Moren is Professor and CPA Ontario Chair in International Entrepreneurship at York University's Schulich School of Business and Honorary Professor at the University of Queensland Business School. She has held faculty appointments at Université Laval, Carnegie Mellon University, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Humboldt Universität, Case Western Reserve University, and the University of Waterloo, where she served as Canada Research Chair in Innovation and Technical Entrepreneurship. Her research is published in leading journals including Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice, Journal of Business Venturing, Organization Science, Production and Operations Management, Research Policy, Strategic Entrepreneurship Journal, and Strategic Management Journal. She has held senior service roles with the Academy of Management and INFORMS, receiving multiple service and distinguished speaker awards. Moren currently serves as Editor of Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice and is the recipient of the Academy of Management Entrepreneurship Division's 2021 Dedication to Entrepreneurship Award.

Nicholle Lindner

Nicholle Lindner is a leading financial services and technology executive focused on using technology and innovation to deliver sustainable, customer-centric outcomes. Her work centres on fit-for-purpose technology strategies aligned to business outcomes, optimised delivery models, future IT talent, vendor selection, and innovative ecosystem partnerships. She is a panellist, keynote speaker, academic advisor, and published author on the application of technology, a Global Fellow of the Securities and Investments Institute, and one of the APAC Who's Who in Financial Services. A member of Chief Executive Women, she is committed to advancing women's leadership and gender equity. Nicholle has held influential roles as a board director, expert in residence, guest lecturer, and independent advisor, and is a volunteer mentor and pro bono entrepreneurial coach to UNSW and University of Sydney students.

Erik Lundmark

Associate Professor Lundmark's research focuses on entrepreneurship and the emergence of new organisation(s). He is interested in how we can facilitate reflexivity through making the assumptions underpinning entrepreneurship research, which are often implicit, explicit and subject to scrutiny. He regularly publishes in leading entrepreneurship journals such as Journal of Business Venturing and Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice. Through cross-disciplinary collaborations he has also published in leading journals in other fields such as Nature Medicine, Journal of Management Studies, Journal of Business Ethics and Trends in Hearing. He has taught in the area of management and entrepreneurship since 2007.

In 2015 he received the Vice Chancellor's Citation for Outstanding Contributions to Student Learning and in 2020 he received the Vice-Chancellor's Award for Teaching Excellence.
